Illud Amicitiæ quondam venerabile Numen
Proſtat, & in Quæſtu pro Meretrice ſedet,
OVID.

Dr. B——y to H. R. (Author of the laſt Letter in this Journal againſt Dancing) ſendeth greeting.

Confound thee, thou falſe Friend!

IN your laſt Letter, you have intirely diſobliged all the Ladies in England, loſt a good old Friend, and broke your Vow of Friendſhip: For let me queſtion you a little; What Motive could induce you to betray that grand Secret, viz. that you and I ſaw the Devil ſitting in an Elbow-Chair, in the Shape of an old Dutcheſs? And further, why ſhould you ſo ſeverely inveigh againſt Dancing? Has it ever done you any Harm? Are you a Bit the worſe for it? Now, at this Time I intend only to give you a little Advice about Friendſhip (for you know what a Number of Pamphlets I have read, and how many Years I have ſpent in poring over Dutch Authors) and therefore I muſt neceſſarily know much about Friendſhip, ſo far as relates to keeping Secrets: So for a quicker Diſpatch, I'd have you read over this following Tale:

Nec retinent patulæ Commiſſa fideliter Aures.

The two Friends.

WILLIAM and John did once agree,
That they devoted Friends would be;
Each one another's Secrets knew,
And promis'd to be always true.
But once a main Diſpute aroſe,
Which ever after made 'em Foes:
For Will. avow'd, upon his Life,
His own was prettier than John's Wife;
John did, on t'other Hand, proteſt,
His Wife was much the handſomeſt,
And by ſuch Proofs he made it clear,
That truly Will. began to ſwear;
I hope (quoth he) good Mr. John,
You have not quite forgot ſo ſoon
The Time you ſtole the Silver Spoon.
Gadſo! (cries John) what News you tell!
You mean that Night you kiſt our Nell.

Now, Fellow, peruſe this Tale, and ſuffer me to ſign myſelf,

Your moſt diſobliged Friend,
Dr. B——.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER: Or, UNIVERSAL JOURNAL.

SIR,

WILL. HINT and I have for a long Time had a Controverſy, whether of us two is the beſt Poet; ſeveral Poems we have wrote, that have been printed in ſeveral Papers, and met with their due Applauſe; and I hope theſe will meet with the like Succeſs.

An Epigram of Martial burleſqu'd.

HOEDINA tibi Pelle contegenti
Nuda Tempora, Verticemque calvum,
Feſtive tibi, Phœbe, dixit ille
Qui dixit, Caput eſſe calceatum.

In Engliſh.

A Cobler once at Kingſton Fair,
Saw a Poſſillion that was there,
Who on his Head a Cap did wear,
That was by Chance of Leather made;
And, troth! the witty Cobler ſaid,
He wore his Shoe upon his Head.

This Epigram is Will. Hint's Performance, who you very well know is a great Enemy to me, (who am Mr. Bavius) and therefore I think I ought to be the like to him; I hope I have excell'd in the ſequent Poem.

Æſop, Page 1. Fable 1.

The Eagle and the Fox.

AN Eagle and a Fox did once contrive,
That they in perfect Amity would live;
And that the Bargain might not ſlip away,
They always had a Viſit once a Day;
But now the Time of Breeding, Sir, drew near,
For Sol ſhone brighter, and the Air more clear;
It chanc'd that in a Field a Tree there ſtood,
Planted as People ſay by one Tom Wood;
Up in this Tree the Eagle builds her Neſt,
Both for to lay her Egs and take her Reſt;
And friendly Reynard willing to be nigh,
Brought forth her young ones in the Shrubs hard by:
(Ill-fated Friendſhip, ah how ſoon they're Foes!)
Relate my Muſe the Story of their Woes.
The Fox went out one Day to ſeek ſome Food,
To fill the Bellies of her hungry Brood;
The Eagle alſo being in want that Day,
Flew down and bore the Fox's Cubs away,
And made the pretty Dears her young ones Prey;
The Fox return'd and ſoon found out the Act,
And yet wan't half ſo ſorry for the Fact,
Viz. that th' Eagle had her young ones ſlain,
But that ſhe could have no Revenge again;
She b'ing a Bird up in the Air could fly,
Herſelf a Beaſt could not perſue her high;
So zouns! ſhe fell a raving juſt like Lee,
When his mad Heroe is as mad as he;
To tell the Eagle's Looks and her Excuſe
Would ſpoil my Pen, nay more 'twould tire my Muſe.
So now I've done, I'll add but one more Line,
The Fox had her Revenge another Time.

Now I can't help adding, By Jupiter Ammon! it is very fine. BAVIUS.

On the Death of the late ingenious Mr. Charles Snell.

WRITING's firſt Ornament! a ſad Adieu!
Tho' ſtill I hope (and often Hopes are true)
Thence hope I will, diſdaining Changes paſt,
To meet this fair Accomptant in his laſt.
Thy ſocial Virtues were ſo fairly known
That Mirth and Humour were allow'd thy own:
And Sterling Honeſty without Allay
Bleſt like meridian Suns thy every Day.
Courted and lov'd, what more could Man deſire?
The Feaſt replete, 'twas decent to retire.
But, ah! retir'd thy weeping Friends deplore.—
Tho' more enjoy'd, they ſtill had wiſh'd for more.
Fond of himſelf, Mankind's ſo much a Slave,
The preſent ſtifles all beyond the Grave.
Thence our falſe Wiſhes frailly oft prefer
To future Joys our poor Enjoyments here.

The Herald.

I Had juſt ſlipp'd on my Morning Gown, when my Servant enter'd my Room, to tell me one 'Squire Drudge waited below to ſpeak with me, and ſwore he would not leave the Houſe till he had ſeen me. The Name itſelf had quiteſſlipt my Memory, and while I was endeavouring to recollect, enters in his proper Perſon, Thomas Drudge, who had been Game-keeper and Huntſman to my Father, and who by putting himſelf forward, as he call'd it, had got himſelf Tenant to one of the beſt Farms my Father left me. I had not ſeen him for many Years, nor heard much of him, more than as a thriving Fellow: But his Appearance reviv'd all his younger Lineaments, and fully demonſtrated that Age itſelf is not alike ſevere to all. He was much my Superior in Years, and yet ſo hale and hearty, that had it been poſſible I ſhould not unwillingly have hearkened to an Exchange of Countenances. Landlord, ſays he, as ſoon as he enter'd, I am glad to ſee you. This is the firſt Time I e'er ſaw London, and I was reſolv'd not to leave it till I had ſeen you. I thank'd him kindly, and asking a courſe what Buſineſs brought him to Town? Why, truly, reply'd Thomas, my Services at the Election were ſo well taken, that they wou'd not let me reſt till I had promis'd to come up to be made a Juſtice of Peace of. And have they been as good as their Words? ſaid I. Marry! have they, reply'd Thomas; and I had Yeſterday agreed for my Coach, but that the paltry Herald baulk'd me of my Coat of Arms. He, forſooth! continu'd Thomas, never heard of the Family of the Drudges; and tho' I told him my Grandfather was a Malſter, and my Father a Millar; would you believe it, Landlord? he would needs have me the firſt of my Family. I confeſs to you, I believe I am the firſt Gentleman; but the Drudges, I dare aver it, have been a Family from William the Conqueror, or ſooner. The Drudges, no Doubt on't, quo' I, have been an antient Family; and he was an Als of a Herald to queſtion it. But may be he aſſign'd for a Reaſon, that the Drudges were a Family before the Conqueſt; and conſequently too old to have any Arms. I ſee no other Way in this Caſe but to purchaſe. Did you feel his Pulſe upon it? Feel his Pulſe? feel his ——, ſays Thomas: No, he offer'd one for thirty Guineas; an unconſcionable Dog! But I have nick'd him: For I have this Day agreed for Coach and Arms and all, for the Money. How ſo? ſaid I. Why, my Coach-maker had a ſecond-hand South-Sea Coach to diſpoſe of, with Arms upon it; ſo like a good Husband I agreed for the Whole; and the Whole will I carry down with me into the Country. But ſuppoſe, ſaid I, the Office ſhould get Notice, and proſecute you for bearing Arms that were not your own. Not my own? ſays Thomas in a Heat. Why? Did I not make a fair Purchaſe? Yes, and have it under Fiſt too. The ordinary Folks, my Neighbours, will ſtare and be pleas'd; and as for my Brother Juſtices, and thoſe above the Bench, I am ſure they won't be angry. I could not but ſmile within myſelf at our new Member of the Commiſſion: But, to carry on the Farce, ſaid I gravely: But, Thomas, did you ever learn to write and read? Write and read? reply'd he. What ſignifies that? I can make my Mark; and know it when I have made it. Pſhaw! as if to write and read were neceſſary Compliſhments for a Juſtice of Peace? Don't be angry, ſaid I, Mr. Juſtice: I only ask Queſtions by Way of Friendlineſs; and, if it might not be offenſive, I would ask one or two more Queſtions, that might perhaps end in your own as well as my Satisfaction. You are my Tenant ſtill, tho' a Juſtice; and I imagine I have ſome Concern in you, and for you, as ſuch. Ask what you pleaſe, Landlord, ſays he; I will not be angry, and will anſwer you every Thing as well as I can. Thus mollified; why then, ſaid I, Mr. Juſtice, do you intend to act on the Bench? There are ſometimes very intricate Caſes will come before you. Why, Landlord, as to that Matter, ſays he, I'll tell you, there's Sir ——, you know him. He has the Character of an able wealthy Man, and a good Head-piece. 'Tis true, he warps a little; he is not altogether of our Party, and therefore I don't intend to believe one Half he ſays. But then, there's Sir William, Sir Roger, and honeſt Robin, as true Tickle-pitchers as live, and as tight as Buckram: A Man can never go wrong that follows them. But they may not always be preſent, ſaid I: Or ſuppoſe a Caſe ſhould be brought before you on Suſpicion of any Crime; what would you do with him? Do with him, ſays he, Why, I'd ſend him to the County Jail directly. What ſhould I do with him? What without examining? ſaid I. Examining? ſays he Why if I did not like his Face it would juſtify the Suſpicion, and I'd ſend him there to be examin'd by the whole Board, to ſee if they lik'd it better than I. And ſuppoſe they ſhould acquit him, ſaid I; beſides the Shame, you may meet with a Man of Mettle and Subſtance that may put you to Expence. A Juſtice of Peace is not a Poſt of ſo eaſy Diſcharge as many imagine: And I am afraid there are too few of thoſe that take 'em on Honour, that take an equal Care of the Diſcharge of their Duty. Were they to conſider the Oaths they ſo eagerly ſwallow, and the large Field of Action that lies before 'em; if they were Men of any Conſcience, they would be far from being covetous of an Office, that can carry along with it no Proportion of Profit, if honeſtly diſcharg'd; and if they wanted Conſcience, in my Opinion they want the true and firſt Qualification for the Office. I know a great many now in Commiſſion, that for theſe very Reaſons decline to act: Tho' Envy and Detraction put it on another Foot They conſider, that tho' they had been taught, that the Service of their Country ought to be the firſt Principle of every honeſt Man; yet a Service that is liable to be circumvented by Ignorance, is not to be enter'd into by an honeſt Man, that would make even that firſt Principle his Rule. For tho' it may be true that he may diſcharge his own Duty conſcientiouſly as to himſelf; yet ſenſible enough of human Weakneſſes, he will prudentially avoid any Accumulation from the well known Weakneſſes of others. As a Juſtice, and ſworn into the Commiſſion, he ſtands oblig'd by his Oath to take Notice of all the Product of his Neighbours Petulancies, and that what one hardy Fellow ſwears againſt, another ſtands almoſt a Law againſt Knowledge: Yet as an honeſt Man, and a Member of the Body Politick, unclog'd with that Honour he can do all the good Offices of a Neighbour, with Commendation from the beſt, and without Blame from any. He can make up Differences without binding over. He can relieve the Poor without paſſing him out of the Pariſh: And as to the Vagabond and Stroller, he has got the Conſtable at Command, and may ſend ſuch to undergo the Drudgery of others. On the Slip of the laſt Word, Drudgery, from my Tongue, I could obſerve my new Juſtice change his Colour a little: However, I thought it better to paſs it over as a lapſus linguæ than to make any Apology; and ſo I went on. I muſt confeſs to you, if the Juſtice of Peace would faithfully diſcharge his Duty, according to his Oath, and conſcientiouſly put the Laws in Execution, it would be a happy Thing for the Nation in general, and of great Eaſe and Advantage to every County in particular. But then to find ſuch a Juſtice, you muſt look out for a Man of Probity and Learning. Probity, to enable him to execute, and Learning, to enable him to know what he is to execute. To make any Man a Juſtice, without a Preſumption of theſe two Qualifications, is like making a Mill horſe a Racer, or one of your Coach-horſes a Pad. There you have hit me, ſays Thomas with a great Fluſh of Pleaſure in his Face; for I have as good a Pad as any is in England, that I intend for one of my Pair. Get another to match him, ſaid I; and till then chooſe the Side the Trotter is plac'd on: For you will find by Experience, that what was eaſieſt out of a Coach, will be moſt uneaſy in. It will be a ſtrange and a new Buſineſs to him as well as yourſelf; and either ſhuffling in your new Trammels, both may be in Danger of getting a Fall. But of all Things, Mr. Juſtice, I beg you will retain that one old good Principle of remembring I am your Landlord. Your new Honour may put you upon a new Way of Life; and one Ambition may produce another. Who knows at that Rate, but you may in a little Time ſet up for Parliament Man? No, Landlord, ſays he, I always thought it better to receive than pay; and to convince you that your Fears are ill grounded, I doubt not but next Election to be able to let you have a Year's Rent a-forehand. But, ſaid I, let me adviſe you not to depend on that. Have you not heard of a late Act of Parliament to prevent Bribery in Elections; by which you forfeit not only treble the Sum, but if detected, are diſqualified from a Vote hereafter? What do you tell me of your Acts? ſays Thomas; if I have a Pair of Boots any Gentleman likes, I give them to him, can any Act of Parliament hinder his making me a Preſent of twenty Guineas in pure Civility? I ſmil'd, Thomas ſneer'd, and ſhook me by the Hand heartily, and ſo we parted.

Extract of a Letter from Barcelona, Jan. 11.

The Spanish Cruizers in these Parts seem to threaten as much Trouble to the British Navigation in these Parts as in America, for Yesterday they brought in the Seafare, of Plymouth, Capt. Robinson, with Sugar, &c. from Nantz for Leghorn, but had touched at Gibraltar, where she took in about 50 Quintals of Wax, and three Moorish Passengers, and on their Account they pretend to make her a Prize; alledging, that the Moors do the same to such British Ships as have Spanish Troops on board, which is far from being true. It is hop'd a Stop will soon be put to these Proceedings, or no Merchant Ship can with Safety, navigate these Seas. The Cruizers which brought in this Ship are two Saytees, and were fitted out against the Moors; but after two Months Cruize could pick up nothing else. We can't be certain what will be the Result of this Affair until an Answer comes from Court.

Colds are now so rife about Town, that there is scarce a Family without them, and it lies for the most Part in People's Heads; the best Medicine is to sweat it off by drinking about three Pints (if a grown Person) of cold Spring Water going to Bed, and in two Nights it carries it off.

Another Receipt for the Publick Good.

Take two or three Dishes of the best high roasted Coffee, with a Tea Spoonful of the best fresh Butter in each Dish; approved of by several eminent Physicians for its Balsamick Virtue and Quality.

There are sixteen Persons ill of Colds and Fevers in the Archbishop of Canterbury's Family at Lambeth Palace.

Deaths. Yesterday Morning at Two o'Clock died of an Asthma, at his House in the Admiralty-Office, in the 70th Year of his Age, George Lord Viscount Torrington, Admiral and Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Fleet, Rear Admiral of Great Britain, and first Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty. He went to Sea with the King's Letter in the Year 1678, and rose gradually by a Course of long and honourable Services to the high Station in which he died, there having been scarce an Action of Consequence at Sea in a Series of more than 50 Years, in which he was not present, and was never unsuccessful in any where he commanded. He spent the Time he presided in the Admiralty in improving the Naval Force of this Kingdom, and in procuring Encouragements for poor Sailors, who may be truly said to have lost a sincere Friend.——Yesterday died, at his Lodgings in Cornhill, Sir Samuel Jackson, formerly a great Trader to Russia.——Last Monday Night Mr. Harvey Spragg, a very eminent Dealer in Silk in Laurence-Lane, went well to Bed, but was found dead the next Morning.——Yesterday died —— Lemon, Esq; Captain of one of the Companies in the Foot-Guards.

FRIDAY, January 19.

On Monday last as some Labourers were digging in the Post-Fields by Golden-Square, for making a Common-Sewer for some new Buildings adjoining, they found, about 12 Foot deep in the Ground, a great Number of Bones of several Persons buried in the Time of the Plague, and great Quantities of their Hair as fresh as ever; the Smell of which was so offensive, that (lest it should cause a new Infection of that dreadful Distemper) the Work was order'd to be fill'd up with all Expedition, tho' great Part of the Sewer was finish'd.

The House of Lords have been pleased to adjourn to Wednesday next; and the House of Commons to Monday.

No Petitions for Private Bills will be received after the 2d of March next, during this Sessions of Parliament.

The Archbishops of Canterbury and York are ill of the present epidemical Disorders; as are also her Grace the Dutchess of Ormond, the Dutchess of Bolton, the Dutchess of Marlborough, and the Lady of the Hon. Benjamin Bathurst, Esq; together with a great many Peers and Peeresses, and other Persons of Distinction.

There was last Night a very slender Appearance at the Masquerade in the Haymarket, on Occasion of this reigning Distemper.

On Tuesday last there was a Board of Admiralty held, when the Crew of one of his Majesty's Ships lying at Portsmouth, presented a Petition to their Lordships, complaining of ill Usage from their Captain; and their Lordships were pleased to examine the Sailors separately, and afterwards the Captain; and upon hearing the Whole, their Lordships were pleased to order a Court-Martial to be held at Portsmouth, to hear the Complaints of the Sailors on board the said Ship, and determine the same; and appointed Philip Cavendish, Esq; Vice-Admiral of the White, to be President of the said Court-Martial, and his Commission was signed by their Lordships accordingly.

On Wednesday last came on the Election of Governors of the Royal African Company of England, when were chosen,

The King's most excellent Majesty, Governor.
Sir Bybye Lake, Bart. Sub Governor.
Charles Hayes, Esq; Deputy-Governor.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Constantinople, Nov. 3. N. S.

A Courier dispatched by Achmet Bashaw, Governor of Bugdad, has brought a Confirmation of the Advices we received some Time since, of a new Revolution in Persia; with the following Circumstances which brought it about. When the last Treaty of Peace was signed between his Highness and the King of Persia Schach Thamas, that Prince sent an Account of it to Thamas Kouli-Kam, his Prime Minister, who then commanded his Armies against the Agbuans. That Minister pretended to approve it; but some Time after, drawing near to Ispahan at the Head of his Army, he publickly blamed the King his Master, charging him with having made a shameful Peace, and declaring openly, that Erivan, Tiflis, the rest of Georgia, and the other Places which had been yielded to the Turks, should remain in their Hand. The Complaints of the Prime Minister lost him for a while the Confidence of the King his Master; but the Regard which that Prince was obliged to shew for so powerful a Subject, who was Master of his Troops, determined him at last to recall him to his Court. The Minister went thither with several of the principal Officers of the Army; and the first Step he took was to seize the King's Person. It is not yet known, whether he has put him to Death, or contented himself with keeping him a Prisoner; but we are assured, that he has proclaimed a young Child, that Prince's Son, and nominated himself Regent of the Kingdom, and Generalissimo of the Armies of Persia. It is added, that that Minister is a great Warrior, and a Man of violent Passions; and that it appears he designs to recover from the Turks all the Conquests they have made upon the Persians. Achmet Bashaw, who sent this Account, is of Opinion, that the Grand Seignior has nothing else to do, but to prepare for this War, and to put himself at the Head of his Troops, to animate them by his Presence to fight so formidable an Enemy. This News has occasioned the holding of a general Divan, at which all the Ministers and principal Officers of the Porte assisted; and it was resolved therein, that the Grand Seignior should write Letters to all the Governors of the Provinces of Persia, to stir them up to avenge their lawful Sovereign, and to take up Arms against this new Usurper; his Highness promising them on his Part, to stand by them with all the Forces of his Empire.

Petersburgh, Dec. 29. The Company of Cadets of the Academy erected last Year, performed a few Days ago their military Exercise, in Presence of the Empress, who appeared much satisfied with their Address and good Appearance. This Company is composed of a Captain, a Lieutenant, a Sub-Lieutenant, an Enfign, 12 inferior Officers, and 133 Cadets, or young Gentlemen, including 13 Grenadiers. 'Tis confirmed that Count Wratislaw, the Emperor's Ambassador, will set out soon to return to Vienna. The Apartments for the Prince of Beveren are now actually finished, and are very near the Palace of the Empress, and the Furniture is very magnificent. Our last Advices from Moscow import, that they had detached thence for the Ukrania two Regiments of Foot and one of Horse, making together 8000 Men, and after their Arrival they will have in that Province 36,000 effective Men of regular Troops.

Naples, Dec. 30. N. S. At length Mount Vesuvius has begun to throw out some Flashes of Fire again, after a Cessation of three Years; so that we hope the subterraneous Combustibles have found Vent, and will cause no more Earthquakes. According to a List sent to our Viceroy, there were 134 Persons killed, and about 300 wounded, in the little City of Ariano, by the last Earthquake; and in the Country of Mirabello there were 516 killed.

Paris, Jan. 24. By Letters from Oran we learn, that the Fortifications of that Place are in a much better State of Defence than ever, and yet the Garrison works hard still in augmenting them. By those from Ceuta, that the King of Morocco's Troops are drawn somewhat farther from the Town.

A Report is spread that the King intends to send an Ambassador Extraordinary to Spain, to execute an important Commission. Several Engineers are said to have received Orders to go and visit the Frontier Places. They talk also of the Duke of Berwick going to command the Army on the Rhine; and that a Camp will be form'd in the three Bishopricks. According to our last Advices from Spain, a Body of Miquelets is raising in Catalonia, and the Marquis de Risbourg, Captain General of that Principality, is getting Forage together in great Quantities to support a large Body of Horse. Several Men of War have sail'd also lately from Malaga, Alicant, and Carthagena, in Pursuit of the Algerines.

Vienna, Jan. 10. The Emperor is every Day present in Council, to deliberate upon the present Situation of Affairs. We hear that the Duke of Lorrain, during his last Stay here, laid before his Imperial Majesty several Memorials on the Part of the Protestants of Hungary, concerning their Grievances on Account of Religion, and that the Ministers of Great Britain and Holland have back'd the same with very nervous Representations to the grand Chancellor.

Hanover, Jan. 16. Orders are arriv'd here from Great Britain, to go on with the new Levies till all the Regiments are compleated to their highest Complement. His Majesty's Forces in this Electorate consist of 30,000 effective Men, not reckoning Invalids and Militia. They write from Swerin, that Prince Anthony Ulrich de Beveren, had pass'd through that City in his Way to Petersburgh, and that he had been receiv'd by the Duke Regent of Mecklenburgh with all possible Tokens of Affection.
